The name of Louis D. Brandels has been mentioned in connection with the present vacancy on the Supreme Bench.
Always a successful lawyer, Mr. Brandels achieved fame during the BallingerPinchot investigation, when he espoused the cause of the conservationists, and again when he appeared for the shippers before the Interstate Commerce Commission in opposition to a general increase in freight rates. He offered at that time to show the railroads how they might save a million dollars per day in operating expenses, declaring this amount was wasted through lack of system.

Mr. Widener, the Philadelphia capitalist, has large interests in the street car and other corporations of that city.
He is also prominent in Republican politics, and was once city treasurer of Philadelphia.

Non-Catholics to Be Addressed At Mission

With every prospect of large attendance the third week of the mission at St. Patrick's Church will begin tonight with the first address especially intended for non-Catholics. The priests of the New York Apostolate will endeavor to explain and resiste commonly held prejudices against the Catholic Church and will set forth the church's attitude on the consolation of the Bible, and the historic episcopacy.

The membership of the League of the Good Shepherd, founded by Monsigner Russell three years ago is now 200 larger as the result of the mission for men conducted last week. That number of men were received into the league last night.

At the mission at the Shrine of the Sacred Heart, Fourteenth street and Park road, which is being conducted by monks from Annapolis, more than 400 women and 300 girls received communion yesterday. A mission for men is being conducted at the Shrine of the Sacred Heart this week, but no mission for non-Catholics is scheduled.

It will re-enforce this argument with a reading of the record to show that such an accomplishment is impossible

The modified Aldrich currency plan will be the one to which the Administration will commit itself. This plan will be presented to Congress by the report of the Monetary Commission at the opening of the coming session. report in favor of the plan. Democrats and Republicans alike are expected to sign the report.

There was prospect of a division until Senator Balley resigned from the Monetary Commission. He took the old-fashloned, States' rights Democratic position that the establishment of such a central bank as is proposed was without the powers of Congress. People familiar with the proceedings inside the commission say that Senator Balley was inclined to admit that the plan itself would probably be beneficial to the country, but he insisted that on constitutional grounds it was impossible. Therefore he felt compelled to oppose it.

This, it is said, is the real reason back of Mr. Bailey's resignation from the Monetary Commission. He could not remain there and in good conscience acquiesce in the report; yet he was will-ing not unnecessarily to interpose his objections to the plan.

Close friends of President Taft are staking much on the possibilities of this

The Bailey constitutional view, however, is entertained by many other Democrats, and is expected to make legislation at this time impossible. Republican forecasters think the outcome will demonstrate that the chance for such legislation resides in the Republican party. If the Senate passes the measure and the House then rejects it because it is held to be an improper assumption of authority by the Federal Government, this will raise a fundamental question of political faith between the two parties. It will be possible then for the Republican leaders to hold out to the business interests of the nation that monetary reform cannot be achieved under Democratic control.
